DUNN & THOMPSON closed the Ball. The Sun discreetly disclaimed it.A DIFFERENT VERSION.—The Democrat of yesterday asserts that these names sign ed to call for the Southern Rights meet ing in Louisville were H. W. Bell, Bell, R. J. Hooper, and John D. Campbell. Mr.
Wells, who is perhaps twenty-five years old, informs us that Benj. Bell is nearly seventy years old, and Hooper and John Dunne are both over twenty-one, and another person aluded to by that paper he also tells us is under age.FIRE—NARROW ESCAPE.—The dwelling of old German on Twelfth street, near Bridge Street, was fired by an incendiary, yesterday morning about 1 o'clock, and entirely consumed. The fire lasted about two hours, and the family had great difficulty in making a safe exit from the burning building.
The engines could do no good, the house not reaching it by hundreds of feet.A MAN FOR STEALING.—Pump Harris, who has a man for stealing pump, has again been guilty of one of his old tricks.He was fixing a pump for a citizen and carried it off and sold it. Pump says he is embarrassed, and wanted to relieve himself from the pressing necessities of the hard times.A SALUTE TO THE SOUTHERN FLAG.—As the new steamer Cotten passed Portland yesterday the friends of Southern Rights who are numerous there, fired a salute of seven guns in honor of the Cotten, their comander, Captain Hooper, and the Southern Confederacy. The voice of Portland is still for secession.THE BOWLING GREEN GAZETTE says the same day that the friends of Southern Rights who are numerous there, fired a salute of
seven guns in honor of the Cotten, their
comander, Captain Hooper, and the Southern Confederacy. The voice of Portland is still for secession.MESSRS. S. G. HEARY & CO will sell the lot of furniture and chairs, this morning (Thursday) at 10 o'clock at auction rooms. Also, by order of Sheriff and Com-stables, a variety of second hand furniture, carpets, &c. At 12 o'clock precisely, by order of underwriters, one thousand pieces of music, very partially damaged at the fire on Main street.SHOOTING.—Samuel Harmon, who has a peculiar knack of embroiling himself in difficulties, shot Jerry Flynn in the temple on Tuesday night. The shooting occurred in front of Harmon's house, on Main street, near Twelfth. Flynn is in a critical condition, and Harmon is in jail.REAL ESTATE AND ELEGANT FURNITURE AT AUCTION.—Mr. C. C. Spencer opens his spring sale of real estate and fine home furniture on Friday morning. The house is desirable and centrally located, and the furniture is of the very best kind.APPOINTMENTS AND REMOVALS.—Edward Gallagher has been appointed Peasant Agent for Kentucky. Mr. Calves, Esq., was appointed to the position of Peasant Agent for the State of Ohio.THE ATTENTION of city and country merchants is directed to the auction sale by T. Anderson & Co., commencing this morning at 10 o'clock. The sale will open with an evasion of English cutlery.THE IMPORTS of New York City, since the first of January, have decreased $90,000,000 as compared with last year. Yet, to quote Lincoln, "nobody's hurt—nobody's suffering."A CAPER.—Yesterday a young gentleman, who was wild by liquor, drove off the trolley and wagon belonging to Monahan's establishment. The last seen of him was driving down Broadway at a fast gait.

LOUISVILLE, KY.

TUESDAY MORNING—MARCH 21.

Louisville and the Southwest.
Dependent on the Southern people, to a greater extent than it is generally believed, for their prosperity and wealth, the business men of Louisville long since saw the necessity of railroad communication with the South and West, by which Tennessee, Alabama, Mississippi, Louisiana, and Arkansas would be brought to their doors, over which gold would be poured into our laps, building up stores, creating workshops, encouraging our manufacturers, increasing capital, and giving employment to thousands.

In a few years past, the Nashville road had been undertaken and pushed to its completion; and by R. George, Hubbard, Northern Massach., and Tennessee were brought into connection with us. The effect was soon seen, and felt in every department of business, and Louisville prospered as it never prospered before.

The Memphis Branch was then undertaken and pressed forward very easily. In September last the cars ran through to Clarksville, and some of the most prominent in Southern Kentucky and Northwest Tennessee were put within a few hours of us.

Our merchants and business men looked forward with confidence and hope to an early connection direct with the commerce and emporiums of Tennessee, and they had with pleasure that in a few months more they would be invited to an exhibition through to Memphis over the completed road.

Thanks to the energy, perseverance, and capacity of those living it in charge, the promise is about being made good.

Yesterday the last rail was laid on the road from Louisville to Memphis; and we doubt not it is now completed. Memphis is our neighbor; and with the generous, large-hearted, and big-hearted people of Clarksville, Paris, and Western Tennessee, we may exchange salutes and greetings from the heart, which will make the intercourse pleasant and commercially profitable.

But other events have deprived us of the means we hoped to reap from this great work. Two days ago, Mr. Lincoln, and Louis, and Texas, and Arkansas, is lost to us, and we are extremely sorry for the present at least. It is near us, almost at our doors; but we cannot grasp it. These States have been drawn out of a Union to which they were attached; but the agreement on which it was based was continually violated by some of the parties to it, and "shed fellowship and brotherhood" made it to them a Union of oppression and injustice, from which they got none of the benefits, and from which they were required to bear the burdens. They felt that their interest, and honor, and safety required them to assert their independence and the necessary commercial regulations adopted by the new Government may have forced us to deprive us of their trade while we and they are members of separate Confederacies; and the stores on Mainstreet, and the manufacturers whose goods found a ready market on the pavements of the succeed States, are alike closed or doing but a nominal business.

We are the neighbors of this Great South; but the good and loyal citizens of these States do not disown us, nor do they, by a portion of our newspaper and of our people, and the "rest," follow suit, manifested services but to obtain extractions further day by day those who should be united to us in the bonds of friendship and good feeling. The trade we seek yet has to go to a great extent driven to other places; and Louisville, despite her railroad communications, will suffer the loss of millions of hard dollars this year alone.

What the future has in store for us, Heaven only knows! Theoretical plen- may argue plausibly that the new world of goods imported into the needed States will not affect the business of Louisville; but there is not a merchant or manufacturer here who does not fear the fallacy of the argument. By the rules of the selection, it may be proved that in a Southern Confederacy, Louisville would not prosper and flourish as she has prospered and flourished in the past. This is a fact, and a fact, because partial and separated; and it needs no demonstration to satisfy any practical man here, that in no event can it be worse than it must be at present.

Sixty-eight though lucky dealers in corner lots, whose houses will hold one idea, and who cannot be convinced that no border city will ever become permanently flourishing and prosperous, may obstinately and stupidly insist that the selected States have acted badly, and therefore we must not consider or act in view of what they have done; but the good sense and practical knowledge of our people will tell them, that we must adapt ourselves to existing facts, and that it is reconstruction being impossible, the South must be final, that then Kentucky must go with the South, or grass will grow in the streets of her cities and the huts of factories and mills and the busy bustle of her stores be heard no more!

(For the Louisville Courier)

The Journal and Mr. Lincoln.
When Lincoln's inaugural was first published, the Journal endorsed it with a single sentence, "We heartily endorse everything" the "Journal" would desire." It was "at least much more bold" than the editor had been "tempted to be," in his opinion of the speech, and he regretted that the editor of the Journal expressed a preference for the "Irrepressible conflict."

Which represent the true sentiments of the editor? We are inclined to believe that the Journal is a leading street merchant, whose entire trade is with the South. By answering this you will oblige an observer.

which press? It will not be long, perhaps, until the larger of these two will absorb the smaller, and Southern papers, now contrive to keep the Border States in the Black Republican Conference, they will have plausible claim upon Lincoln for the "spuds" in "our cause."

In that event, whose claims will be greatest amongst the submission editors? The editor of the Journal will certainly stand the first, and the others will follow him. What to do, will be to get a copy of the Louisville Weekly Democrat dated Oct. 8, 1860, make the comparison that is held in hand, and compare it with the Northern or the Editor or the Journal," and send it to Lincoln. I am sure Lincoln will in 1863, when he becomes president, be a friend to the South, and sympathizing with Mexico, the editor was at the same time a friend to the South, and giving aid and comfort to the enemy.

It is possible that the editor has a "stumbling block" in his own way; but such a thing is not to be expected. It will be remembered that two or three years ago he attempted to prove to the editor of the Democrat more of an Abolitionist than he was, and to do that he procured to have a copy of the "Daily Commonwealth," Boston, sent to the Capital. Price $1000.

Having determined positively to change our business, we offer this date our whole stock of dry goods at cost, and less than cost, for cash. No goods allowed to be sold for more than actual cost, and the greater portion at a loss.

This is one of the heaviest stocks in the market, and the whole is to be closed out to change the business. No goods will be charged. Losses and fixtures for sale.
